
Communication by email and text

It may become useful during the course of treatment to communicate by email, text message (e.g. "SMS") or other electronic methods of communication. Be informed that these methods, in their typical form, are not confidential means of communication. If you use these methods to communicate with there is a reasonable chance that a third party may be able to intercept those messages. The kinds of parties that may intercept these messages include, but are not limited to:

People in your home or other environments who can access your phone, computer, or other devices that you use to read and write messages
Your employer, if you use your work email to communicate
Third parties on the Internet such as server administrators and others who monitor Internet traffic
